AMAZING JUNGLE STORIES OF PANAMA MONKEYS

markably Intelligent

LBERT EDWARDS, the American author, has been making He went to the isthmus recently on his third visit, intending to revise a book on the subject of Panama a deafening clatter and were unable to and the canal which was published During his first week on the isthmus became light they saw that the noise he became acquainted with an Ameri- came from a flock of parrots and parracan named Murphy, who spends most of keets and a colony of monkeys perched his time in the jungles of the Canal tant from their camp. This great tree Zone and that part of Panama which is appeared to be their home, for they now reached by the extended arms of made no steps toward leaving it when Gatun Lake. The acquaintance led to a the men came up and tried to drive number of visits to this jungle American and to a more intimate knowledge of the monkeys of Panama than any white man has yet attained. In speaking of his studies to THE SUN correspondent Mr. Edwards said:

"My first definite interest came on the occasion of a visit made to the home of Mr. Murphy on the headwaters of the Trinidad River late in September. Since the rise of water in the lake and the consequent increase of depth in the Trinidad Mr. Murphy's hermitlike home of bamboo and nipa palm is so easily accessible that he seriously contemplates moving further away from the lake region. As yet, however, the launch parties and amateur exploring expeditions that will almost surely invade his demesne have not disturbed the quiet of his solitude, and he lives there alone except for the jungle animals and birds that stroll fearlessly through his clearing and even seek shelter under his roof. In the limbs of a giant mango tree in front of his hut a family of monkeys makes its home.

"There seems to be a common impression among Americans on the isthmus that the Panama monkey is of one variety only, namely, the small ways, attacks him. spider monkey that is so common the the banks of the Gatun and Chagres oider monkey that is so common along rivers. My first surprise was to find that this is not true. The black monkey of the Trinidad Valley when fully grown stands 3 to 4 feet high and has a tail

"This is not a discovery on my part, the branches of the trees. for I find that a number of the engineers who have conducted surveys in the Trinidad Valley have also run across

Continued from Twelfth Page.

jected to the heartless criticism of an hours during the day realizes that she fine themselves to narrow rooms. They can roam through the whole establish-lease, within reasonable limitations."

vation Army has the hearty cooperation of the leading clubwomen in Cleveland. These women have made possible the acquisition of the property and the thip in the federation have agreed to promote the efficiency of the establish-

The clubwomen will assist the home in protecting itself against imposition girls who are candidates for "adoption."

They will also advance funds to pay who are temporarily out of employ-not only of the practicability of our scheme but of its efficacy as well. It is not a 'crank' movement. It resulted from a close study of the problems which it is intended partly at least to

It is planned to have several of these establishments in New York. One may be located at a central point in Manhattan, another in Brooklyn and a third in The Bronx. Many of the clubwomen of the city have already indicated a desire to cooperate with Commander Miss Evangeline Booth and Mrs. Bovill in Most prominent among these is Mrs.

Brown is also president of the women's auxiliary to the rescue department of the Salvation Army. Mrs. Robbins Lau, another well known clubwoman and active as an auxiliary in the rescue work of the Salvation Army, has prom-up officially by the various clubs interested in the promotion of welfare work among the working girls of New York.

Fortieth and Scovill streets, Cleveland,

It has 100 rooms besides a large basement, which will be fitted up for a dining room accommodating at one sitting more than 100 girls. The property was mortgage of $21,000, but as the value of the property when donated was easily $45,000 Mr. Johnson's gift amounted to for the building for a number of years.

But when the project of building girls' by Gen. Bramwell Booth he, with Col.

es along unique lines was suggested

Col. William Evans, who is in charge the respectable sum of $24,000.

home is located at the corner of The matter will probably be taken ised to aid in this new venture.

me less severe unthinking employer for a number of Big Pythons Hunt Them, of river hydraulics for the Canal Commission, is well acquainted with them both in their wild state and in capton below the same trees. The hydraulics for the Canal Commission, is well acquainted with them both in their wild state and in capton below the same trees. The hydraulics provided that these birds and the monkeys seem to inhelit the same trees. The hydraulics provided that mission, is well acquainted with them, branches; and I have noticed that both in their wild state and in captivity. In fact the few monkeys of this species that are hear less than are hear to inhabit the same trees. The huge snake They Build Living species that are kept in captivity in the species that are kept in captivity in the Canal Zone (the kind that are commonly believed to have been imported from parrots present can glide noiselessly Africa) were brought into the settlements by some negroes who accompanied Mr. Willson on a hydrographic survey up the Trinidad in 1906. "This party of engineers and boat and a study of Panama monkeys. machete men pitched camp one night Sirlo with the Trinidad. An hour before daybreak they were awakened by resume their sleep because of the din by Macmillan & Co. two years ago. that was kept up constantly. When it them from it by throwing sticks and "It was the desire of the engineers to make their camp in that place for a week or more and therefore they set off a charge of dynamite at the roots of the tree in the hope of scaring the monkeys and birds away from the locality. The concussion shook the tree, tore up some of its roots and so stunned the birds and monkeys that they fell to the ground, scores of the former and thirtyseven of the latter. The native negro boatmen rushed up and caught the helpless monkeys and carried them back to the settlements along the canal ine when the party returned to civi-

"Most of these monkeys died almost mmediately in captivity, but three of them are still alive, one at Gatun and two at Bas Obispo. That any of them live in captivity is considered rather remarkable, for the natives frequently catch the black monkey when it is young and try to domesticate it. Soon after it becomes adult it dies.

"The great enemies of the black monkey and about the only ones he seems to fear are the wildcat and the python. Although his habitat is commonly the trees, this monkey frequently descends to the ground and runs about through the underbrush in search of bananas and such roots as he relishes, cacophony. The theory is that on On these foraging expeditions the wild-moonlight nights, when the limbs of On these foraging expeditions the wildcat, concealed along the trails or run-

"It is usually a futile attack, for the black menkey is very agile and detects danger with remarkable sharpness when one considers how small his ears are. His great size and the strength of his tall make it possible for him to jump about the same length as his body, high in the air, and with such a jump whereas the spider monkey of which I he eludes the cat on his first spring. have spoken seldom stands more than Before his enemy has time to recover 18 inches when raised at full length on for another attack the monkey has swung himself clear of the ground into

"He is safe from the python on his perch or roost in a high tree, for althese large monkeys and that F. D. and pursue the monkey rapidly along parrots present can glide noiselessly up to a monkey and seize it before the animal is aware of danger, but the parrots sense the approach of a snake very quickly and by a peculiar series of screams, most uncanny to come from the mouths of birds, they quickly assemble large flocks of parrots from the forest round about.

"These form a long column and fly over the python, each one pecking the snake as it flies by. I have never seen this done and inasmuch as it usually happens at night I presume that this warfare is seldom seen by men. Mr. Murphy has seen it, however, and is my authority for the statement that the assault of the birds either wounds the python so badly or so completely terri-fies him that he quickly lets go of the branch and allows himself to drop, o even fall, from the tree to the ground During such a battle the monkeys keep up an incessant chatter and run abou on the limbs in terror, but take no part whatever in the fight.

"I have made an effort to find ou from Mr. Murphy as well as from the cholos of the jungle whether the Panama python tries to charm monkeys from their perches in the much trees in the way described by Kipling dian. in one of his jungle stories. It is pos-sible that he does, but none of the men with whom I have talked on this subject has ever witnessed such an incident. Of my own knowledge, how-ever, and this is backed up by the experience of Mr. Murphy and many others, I know that the monkey is peculiarly restless on moonlight nights. and in the period of the full moon especially the jungle clatters all night long with monkey talk. The noise seems not to awaken the parrots and parrakeets, however, for these garrulous birds remain silent during the whole monkey concert, just as they do on dark nights

"Mr. Murphy has a theory that this moonlight concert of the monkeys is carried on in relays; that is, that a tribe will arrange to have certain of its number make a noise for a certain length of time on moonlight nights and then at an agreed time these will be relieved and others will take up the the trees are flooded by the ghostly white light which the moon sends out in the tropics, the enemies of the monkey find it possible to scare them from the trees, and that the noise is kept up until daylight for the purpose of reassuring the other members of the tribe and of scaring away the enemy. This mounting guard, if such it may be called, is only one of several social manifestations that I have noted among the big monkeys of the Trinidad Valley.

"The monkeys of the Chagres Valley are of the small or spider type, and although I have made several excursions of a few days into the jungle along the Chagres and Gatun rivers I have not

Mr. George Grossmith, who is a son of a more famous father of that name, is an easy figure to caricature. He is phenomenally tall and lanky, and these physical peculiarities are responsible for much of his success as a come-

Signor Caruso.

AS MAX BEERBOHM SEES

FOREIGN CELEBRITIES

Reproductions of Some of the Leaves in His Book of "Fifty Caricatures," Just Issued by E. P. Dutton & Co.

M. Rostand.

The Adventures of the Laxworthy Trio

Continued from Thirteenth Page.

eral moments. Then he rose slowly to "My dear young lady," he said, 'nothing that you can do or leave un-done can alter one hair's breadth the course of events which are likely to transpire. My advice to you is to wait." "I feel sure you're right," she declared with a little sigh of relief. "It's very nice of you, Mr. Laxworthy." They were on their way back to the hotel. Mr. Laxworthy consulted his watch and frowned.

"I have lost count of time to the extent of four minutes," he said_irritably. "Good afternoon, Miss Chambers."

Mr. Laxworthy's room looked out at the back of the hotel. He had scarcely seated himself in his customary chair when there was a nurried tap at the door and Forrest Anderson entered.

ago," Mr. Anderson announced. "You'll will be yours." see him in a minute or two coming tround that belt of trees." Mr. Laxworthy nodded and adjusted small but powerful set of binoculars. In a few moments the figure of the flower farmer appeared in the direction indicated. He was coming straight tosmall footpath, walking hurriedly and more than once stopping to look behind. Suddenly when within about a couple of hundred yards of his apparent destination he checked his pace and com- Hotel at Hyeres were witnesses menced to saunter. A man was on his tragedy unique perhaps in the live way to meet him. Mr. Laxworthy gave most of them. The band was play ent to an exclamation of annoyance. "They will be too far away to be of People were standing about in li any use to me," he muttered. "Slip knots, talking before settling down down quickly. Forrest, and disturb them. If they see you they will cer-tainly come nearer to the hotel rather liquor with his friend Mr. Hamar. than further away."

Mr. Laxworthy through his glasses watched the meeting of the two men. At first they stood face to face. Presently they sat down on a fallen log. Then Mr. Anderson, strolling along and was stopped half way. He turned whistling loudly, disturbed them. mediately began climbing up the chain man who had issued from the hotel rose and greeted them respectfully. Mr. Anderson paused for a moment and the man who had issued from the hotel stopped every now and then to admire

> The flower farmer and his companion ose and came slowly together toward the hotel. At the edge of the kitchen garden they paused and seated them- duty to arrest you for the murder under Mr. Laxworthy's window. They talked earnestly for a time and then

Mr. Laxworthy shut his binoculars with a faint smile. He then had his tea moved into Sydney's room, on the other side of the corridor, and settled down to wait for a visitor. In less than five minutes there was a knock at the door. It was the head waiter himself who entered. He closed the door behind him and advanced into the room before he

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Laxworthy," he said, "but Jean Massen, the man who keeps the flower farm, is here and wishes to speak to you.'

Mr. Laxworthy repeated. The head waiter, a smart, well groomed little man whom everybody

"I was not sure, sir, whether you would care to receive him." he said confidentially.

Mr. Laxworthy laid down his maga-

"I have no objection to seeing the man," he decided. "Pray bring him here yourself."

Jean Massen, sober enough now, was ushered in a few minutes later. He scarcely waited until the door was closed before he commenced his story.

"Monsieur," he declared, "it is not only the thousand pounds reward, it is afternoon Jean Massen, the not only the money. When I think of farmer, and Luigi here net and a what has been done I tremble all over. My wife too, she has implored me to tell the truth. Monsieur, I come to you because you understand my tongue and because you first brought me word of that reward, which shows, monsieur," he added with a cunning gleam in his eyes, "that you had some idea in your head. There is an Englishman here, an invalid, who was with me in the field when the stranger first came. night the Englishman came to me." Mr. Laxworthy nodded slowly. "Ah!" he remarked. "I noticed that he took a walk." "He came to me, monsieur, and he told me that the stranger was no peasant, as he seemed, but a man who was his mortal enemy. He offered me so much money that I dare not mention it if I would take one of my own pruning knives and stab the stranger while "Rachael, the Woman of Death he slept. Monsieur, how could 1? What will appear in next SUNDAY'S SUNDAY'S II did do was this. I said to him sieur, if you have a quarrel wit man, he lies there in my barn, and affair is none of mine. Settle your ferences and my ears are deaf finished. "He left me, monsieur, and he ike a leaf; but he went out toward arn, and on the way he picked up of my pruning knives from the top barrel. What he did in that barn, sieur, who but the good God shall tel Mr. Laxworthy had listened t farmer's recital, and his face had nained like the face of a sphinx

"This, then, Jean Massen, is all you know of the affair?" he asked "It is all, monsieur, and more" nough," the man declared. "The truth in these matters only safety," Mr. Laxworthy quietly. "Go to the chief of the poand tell him what you have told n "He left the flower farm two minutes If the Englishman is taken the rew

The man breathed a deep sigh. 'I wish you good day, sir," he sa and left the room.

Mr. Laxworthy, from the belieny. watched him descend the hill and take the path through the woods into Hyere Then, with a little shrug of the shoul ward the back of the hotel along a ders, he resumed his study of the Quar terly Review.

> It was in the lounge after dinner evening that the guests of the Parathe music of a popular comic their bridge. Mr. Lenfield, looking liquor with his friend Mr. Hamar. American girl was there, and L. dimself was serving them.

Then down the boad passagew, which led through the lounge a se geant, followed by a gendarme, push his way, to the consternation of one. They were accompanied b walked straight to where Mr. Lent was sitting. The American girl saw them first, went pale to the The young man himself sat perf still. His eyes were set in a fixed st his cheeks were ghastly. The serge came to a standstill before him. "Monsieur," he announced, "it man whose name is at present known at the flower farm of Jean sen last night."

The young man half rose, and collapsed. Mr. Laxworthy interv-"Mr. Sergeant," he said, "in the terests of justice let me assure that you are making a mistake. man of whom you speak was an lishman, John Beggs, detective. unfortunately for him, spent five of his life in Genoa. This is the who murdered him. I can furnish believe, with satisfactory proof."

Mr. Laxworthy's hand suddenly upon the shoulder of the head w With a crash Luigi's tray of liqui "It is a lie!" he shricked.

The gendarme seized him by the Mr. Laxworthy cleared his threat "The murdered man, John Beggs said, "was responsible for the arre-Genoa four years ago of the un this man, Luigi Cantello. The and his nephew here were both bers of the Camorra, and John H who fled at once to England, has since then with a price upon his

"He came out here to watch. I be over Mr. Lenfield, with whose aff have nothing whatever to do. He face to face with Luigi Cantello. was a frequent visitor at the farm, and he has paid the penalty afternoon Jean Massen, the were certainly incriminating, the could easily be fixed upon the lishman, Lenfield, and the reward vided between them. A series of dents has placed these facts in my

There was a moment's breathle lence. The sergeant had turned to With a sud, en, ..erce mov Last the head waiter wrenched himself For a second he crouched as the about to spring at xwor hy. The changed his mind. A knife flash the air. His own death cry was dre in the shricks of the women. The had paid his own debt. (Copyright, 1913, by the Wheele dicate, Inc.) The third story in this series is "Rachael, the Woman of Death much as the unsatisfied longing for ments, decided that it would serve such congenial society. We are trying to a purpose admirably. The women's clubs o woman who has probably been subto the aid of the promoters and it seems that the financing of the enterprise is now fully assured. The home will be opened early in January. has a home and a hearth to go to when "Cleveland, like many other cities. quitting time has arrived the trials behas a large number of young womer who are receiving salaries of $5 a week "At the Martha Washington Club our It is not an easy matter when living daughters will not be required to conaway from home for these girls to keep good and straight on so small a sum, Col. Evans said recently. "My inten-tion in having the home so fitted up ment, romp, play or do anything they is to assist in solving one of the most Col. Bovill said in this work the Saldifficult problems with which the nation is now confronted, that of finding the means by which young girls can live on small and even insignificant salaries and still enjoy the comforts, recreations furnishing of the home. Many of the individual clubs which hold memberand social advantages that they would enjoy in their own homes.' The home will be under the general furnish rooms and in other ways to supervision of Col. Margaret Bovill, but under the immediate care of "Mother" Christina Norland and "Mother" Mary Goodall. Each of these young women has the rank of adjutant in the Salvaand will ascertain the antecedents of tion Army.

Volunteer lecturers and teachers from the Y. W. C. A., the public schools and women's clubs will take part in the cost of entertaining yo ng women directing the education of the young girls. Dômestic science will be taught "This is only a beginning," said Col. by able exponents of that useful art. Bovill. "We are thoroughly convinced Signor Gabriele d'Annunzio.

Girth. "Stick to the quiet method and you'll be just the them that was given to me on the Trin idad. Nor have I had the same practical guidance which my strange jungle friend has been able to give me.

section. Later I will tell you why I have changed my mind about this.

the fire department house in Culebra, and I have spent many hours studying this wisest of all the monkeys that I "Ordinarily he is allowed to run about of it at will, but occasionally, after he has broken some rule that he knows well, the firemen will restrict his move stretched across one end of the yard. the top off our soup tureen."

Mr. Hawtrey to Mr. du Maurier how very like it was to the head of baby. Nevertheless I ate the stew with "It was my purpose to outfit an exedition with sufficient supplies so that could spend several weeks along the had in years, for I fancied myself a headwaters of the Chagres River, and home again in New York and saw my

"From the little I have seen of the spider monkey I know that he also lives in tribes in the trees and that, unlike the black monkey, he is easily domesti cated and takes kindly to the pampered life of the native settlements. One of the spider monkeys is in captivity at relish, for the monkey is delicious meat "That night, however, I was disturbe by a very vivid dream, the first I had hoped to return with a fresh fund of wife at the head of the table and two information about the monkeys of that of the children seated on either side section. Later I will tell you why I She lifted the cover from a large soup tureen and smiled at me pleasantly

For the first time in my study of mon-keys I was reminded of the great likesame presently.

Dawning of a horrid doubt as to the divine right.

The monkey is thus given only the liberty of a certain runway. One day I fastened a block of wood on the wire so that the monkey's movements would be arrested half way in case he should try to run toward the fire house, and then I called to him from the door and "He came running toward me, but around, looked up at the wire and im-which held him. He hung upon the wire with his tail and hind feet, and with his mouth and front paws removed the block of wood. He then climbed carefully down the chain and ran up to the door, where he was given the sugar

"His love for sweets is one of the

The firemen have taught evidences of the debauching effects of civilization. He will do anything to him to crawl up their legs and stick his hand into their pockets to extract therefrom lumps of sugar, candy and my study of the Panama monkeys.

"Now for my reason for abandoning "I wandered into the jungle in the afternoon two days ago and night overtook me before I could return. I found the shack of a cholo, and fortunately found also that this man was one whom I had met at the home of Mr. Murphy I was asked to stay all night, and did so we would have a monkey stew. While the dish was in preparation I went to the open fire over which the pot was boiling and looked down into the pot ness of the monkey face to that of human being. As the stew was stirred the head would come constantly to the top, and although there was no semblance of life I could not but think "At supper time I was informed that that he so well earned.

obtain them.

cakes.

tempted him with a lump of sugar.

saying the while: "Albert, on account of the high cos of living I thought I'd try cooking harlie, and if we find that he is all right we can raise our own meat here after.' "Of course," said Mr. Edwards, "this was only a fantastic dream, and yet the following morning I made my way back to Mr. Murphy's home and as soon as ossible packed up my belongings and took my cayuca back to Gatun. I do not like to be weak in such matters, the fire house and in the yard in front but the horrible thought has pursued me and I shall probably not resume my study of Panama monkeys; for whenever I think of going again to the ments by fastening a light chain to his jungle there comes before my eyes the belly band and placing the other end picture of my youngest son looking up through a ring upon a wire which is reproachfully at me as his mother takes

